

The Carson Daily Appeal

CARSON CITY:

Saturday, March 29, 1873.

THE BODY of a dead Indian is lying near the Waitz Warm Springs, north of town—or was there last Sunday. One who saw it described it as in a deplorable plight, one of the arms having been knawed by coyotes or other beasts, and some of the bones being bleached by the action of the sun and rain and air. Do these frequently found dead Indians wander off when drunk and thus come to a solitary death? Or do the men and women of their tribe desert them when mortal sickness comes upon them and leave them to the mercy of the elements and the beasts of the wilderness. This is a pertinent query, inasmuch as the finding of the remains of dead Indians hereabout is not an unprecedented thing. In old times the Washoes burned their dead—and the big fires south of the town, a few nights ago were lighted, so a squaw told an inquisitive pale face of the squaw's own sex, in honor of a "biginjun" who did, according to her version, "heap die." But the unearched for corpse of a man of that tribe, found some months since near the old, hill side grave yard, and some others that we have heard of, and this one by the Springs, indicate a carelessness concerning their dead fellows on the part of the Indians who live in this vicinity which is a little curious, if not not somewhat shocking. We don't know whether anybody of the white variety of person intends to give interment to those remains; but we submit the question: would it not be well for the county authorities to have a little kindly earth shoveled upon these poor, outcast bones?

We noticed a large peach tree in blossom yesterday at Fulstone's place on King street. This is unusually, unfortunately early; for as all past experiences have taught those of us who live in this desert in the Great Basin, forward Springs, Springs which set the sap to running early and whose early warmth causes the trees to put forth their buds in the first part of the season are always succeeded by frosts, untimely enough and severe enough to destroy all the young fruit. We are now having weather which, for safety's sake, ought to be deferred until the latter half of May. Look back at last year. March we know nothing about, for we weren't here; but April was just cold enough to keep the vegetation well back, and during almost all the month of May cool north winds prevailed. The result was that the blossoming of the fruit trees was deferred until all probable danger to the young fruit had gone by, and besides our having a full crop of plums, pears, apples, etc., the trees and grass remained fresh and green until the Autumn frosts had suddenly killed the leaves and the Autumn winds had stripped the limbs. Indeed, so sudden was the coming of the frost and so severe the immediately succeeding high wind, that Summer was suddenly transformed into Fall, which short lived season in forty-eight hours or less was succeding under the bare poles of Winter. But a bird in hand is worth two in the bush; and it is better to thank God for the present blessings of balmy winds and azure skies than to be bellyaching about the future.

THAT PEACOCK of Jake Muller's has been discovered by his owner and conveyed back to his accustomed roosting place. He had wandered up to Gilbert's ranch, and Gilbert not having been in town for a day or two, and being beyond the beat of our carrier, didn't see the notice which appeared in the APPEAL, and so it came about that some days elapsed from the time of the fowl's being missed till the date of his recapture. Some dogs near about Mr. Gilbert's place came near destroying this fine bird and would probably have hounded him to death had it not been for Mrs. G. who, though sick, went to his rescue. This peacock isn't Muller's property, but is owned by a man in Virginia or Gold Hill who ranched him out here thinking to improve Jake's offer of marrying him to a female pea fowl at present residing in Marysville. It is a pity that this beautiful bird should have met with such misadventures here; for his owner being alarmed for his safety has taken him home.

A SHOEMAKER, from Empire, came to Carson yesterday, on his way home from the Genoa Hot Springs where he had spent five days seeking relief for an aggravated case of toothache in vain. Arriving here, Sharp relieved him of two of his Teutonic molars and sent him on to Dutch Nick's a happier if not a better man.

AUCTION SALE OF FURNITURE.—Mr. Maish will sell to-day, at 1 o'clock, near Winnie & David's stable, a superior lot of furniture of all sorts; and household goods of all kinds desirable for frugal housewives.

HOLDERS OF WARRANTS are interested in Jerry Schooling's notice in another column. The money which the oath of the Board of Examiners declared to be in the Treasury is the gratifying ground-work of this condition of solvency.

JOHNNY MEDER will auction off his flowers at 10:30 o'clock to-day.

TO PREACHERS.—Bring your religious notices in early, if you intend bringing in any at all.

GOVERNOR BRADLEY will return hither and be on hand to exercise the gubernatorial functions to-day—so we were semi-officially informed in the office of the Secretary of State, yesterday—into which department of the government we mechanically wandered while suffering from an oppressive sense of dejection at not finding General Thornton at his desk in the Executive office.

THE Gold Hill News of last evening makes note of the death yesterday afternoon of Geo. H. Irwin—better known as "Beany" Irwin. He died of pneumonia. He was one of the great favorites of Virginia City.

FATAL AFTER-EFFECTS OF THE EPIDEMIC.—A day or two since Matt Rinckel lost a fine mare which he has been driving in his butcher's wagon. She had the epizootic, just as nearly all the horses have had it, and was getting along well enough, apparently, when all at once dropsy developed itself in her legs, from whence it made its appearance in her head; and when this phase of the disease had continued for a week or more, and just after having been given a drink of water, she walked a little way and then fell down and died. We have heard of one other similar case, near here, but learned no particulars. This mare of Rinckel's was one of a team and was worth about $200.

RETURNED.—H. F. Rice returned from San Francisco yesterday morning. He had been absent from Carson four or five days.

A NUMBER of interested parties will be glad to know that a deed of the Garrett estate, from the heirs, has been received here.

Mrs. STOUTENBURGH wishes to inform the ladies of Carson and vicinity she has returned from San Francisco and will resume business on Fourth street in rear of Olcott's store. mh7

R. FRED. BROOKS, bookeller, stationer and newsdealer, dealer in cheap jewelry, cutlery, toys, musical instruments, fancy goods, imported cigars and tobacco. Agency for the Royal Havana lottery, opposite the Ormsby House next door to Ball's hardware store, Carson City, Nevada.

THERE are no prisoners in the Washoe county jail. The malefactors of that county are all at large.

RECENT high water has impaired the Truckee as a fish yielding stream.

PALISADE RAILROAD.—It appears that the projectors of the Palisade and Eureka railroad have not yet abandoned their enterprise. We yesterday received a dispatch from Major McCoy, stating that an effort will now be made to build the road by subscription. We sincerely hope that the undertaking may succeed. It is manifestly to the interest of our people, if they take stock in any enterprise of the kind, to aid the Palisade road. It will give us eighty miles of taxable road in the county and besides it is the shortest and most direct route for freight and travel to or from the westward. By the way of Railroad Canyon and Elko, it is fifty-two miles farther to Palisade from Eureka, than by the direct route through Garden Pass and Pine Valley. This is of itself quite an item, considering that most of our business is done with San Francisco. Let the parties who have this road in hand but make a start in good faith, and we are certain that the leading business men and mining companies of Eureka will aid its construction to the extent of their ability.—Eureka Sentinel.

BULLY FOR MCGUFFIE!—A Pioche telegram relates the following instance of heroism on the part of McGuffie:

A bold robbery was committed at Elko on the night of the 21st instant. Three unknown men entered the house of James McGuffie, leveled revolvers at him, put a sack over his head and ordered him to hand over $50,000 in cash and certain bonds which they believed he had in his possession. McGuffie refused, and they then tied him and took all the money they could find in the house, amounting to $250, and made their escape. The authorities are in pursuit of the robbers.

BROOKLYN is well advertised as a good place wherein to commit a mysterious murder and not get caught at it; for the press dispatches say that of the eight secret assassinations which have been perpetrated there within a few years not one has been ferreted out.
